

New Yorkers Plan Grand Welcome for Liner Lusitania

VICTORIOUS OCEAN FLYER, BREAKING ALL
SPEED RECORDS, DUE TO-MORROW.

Phenomenal Average.

If the Lusitania maintains the present speed right up to Sandy Hook, she will have averaged well over twenty-four knots as home, should never before attained for a trans-Atlantic liner.

At the time she was started, she was in a position to make a record of over twenty-four knots in a day over leaving Queensboro.

The crew of the vessel is in constant communication with the office of the company by wireless. Ernest Canard, one of the directors of the line, was on board, while the following officers were aboard.

At the Lusitania, which is due to leave New York on Friday morning, the following officers were aboard.

Big Sum in Pools.

Passengers are taking intense interest in the working of the ship. Pools are being made on the daily record of the vessel. In every one there is at least $1000 in the pool. The pool is being made on the daily record of the vessel. In every one there is at least $1000 in the pool.

TRUST HEADS SCARED AT PERIL OF PROSECUTION

Fear of Jail Sentence Racks Minds of Corporation Officials—Jerome Has Evidence.

The trust magnates are somewhat nervous over the fact that Wesley M. Oliver, president of the United States Steel Corporation, and other officers and directors in New York are liable to serve time in jail for violation of the anti-trust laws.

Attorney General Jackson of New York has caught them with the "goods," and it is now only up to District Attorney Jerome to do his share and take the case before the Grand Jury.

What Mr. Jerome is going to do is a question that interests all the consumers in Boston as well as in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and other cities. If the American Trust Company is to be prosecuted, it will mean the end of the trust system in this country.

The trust system has been the cause of much of the evil in this country. It has been the cause of the monopoly, and it has been the cause of the oppression of the people.

Synopsis

SOME of the most startling adventures of Zara, woman of mystery, who has been marked for death, are given in this series of chapters. The first chapter, "The Marked for Death," tells of Zara's escape from a prison in New York, and her flight to Boston. The second chapter, "The Woman of Mystery," tells of Zara's flight to Boston, and her escape from a prison in New York. The third chapter, "The Marked for Death," tells of Zara's escape from a prison in New York, and her flight to Boston.

CHAPTER IV.

Would that light never go away? It seemed to Zara as she sat in the chair, looking at the clock. The light seemed to be looking at her. She felt as if she were being watched. She felt as if she were being followed. She felt as if she were being hunted. She felt as if she were being marked for death.

INSPECTORS WATCH FOR SMUGGLERS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 12.—Tramping the beach at Point Judith, an inspector of the United States Immigration Bureau is closely scanning the sea for a sight of two schooners, the Meteor and the Venus, said to be bringing aliens from the Cape Verde Islands to be surreptitiously landed on the American coast, probably in Narragansett Bay.

Most yesterday he watched the mist-shrouded surface of the towing waters of Black Island Sound, now from the vantage point of the lighthouse and now from the low lying sand dunes along the beach. He talked with the crew of the life-saving station, the lighthouse keeper and the other men in the vicinity.

Two men were seen to be departing in other places, and left many pairs of eyes looking seaward at intervals, ready to notify the Immigration Commissioners should a suspicious sail loom in the offing. The work of the inspectors at the lighthouse and at the other points of Black Island civilization was duplicated all along the coast from New London, extended to New Bedford, where ever, in fact, a bay or inlet offered a harbor for a craft wishing to discharge its freight on the waterway.

Narragansett Bay is a favorite place for the craft to land their loads of men not native to the soil, and when they are seen, the inspectors are ready to take action. The inspectors are ready to take action. The inspectors are ready to take action.

DR. STICKPOLE HEAD WITHOUT BAIL AT DOVER

Physicians Testify Ryan Girl
Died as Result of Illegal Treatment.

By Long Distance Telephone to the Boston American.

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 12.—Stickpole was held without bail for the grand jury today as a result of the death of Miss Katherine Ryan of Lowell, whom Mrs. Sullivan and Coleman said they thought had died because of illegal treatment.

The two defendants seemed to be in a deadly feud of newspaper photographs, for Ryan was a white handkerchief over her face, and the Stickpole kept his hand behind his eyes as much as possible. The doctor was in charge of Sheriff Smith and said that he was going to go and get the body.

Miss Ryan, daughter of Lowell, the dead girl, was a white handkerchief over her face, and the Stickpole kept his hand behind his eyes as much as possible. The doctor was in charge of Sheriff Smith and said that he was going to go and get the body.

The hearing of Edward Ryan, the young man said to have been a friend of the dead girl, came at 2:15 this afternoon in the Police Court.

The hearing of Edward Ryan, the young man said to have been a friend of the dead girl, came at 2:15 this afternoon in the Police Court.

The two defendants seemed to be in a deadly feud of newspaper photographs, for Ryan was a white handkerchief over her face, and the Stickpole kept his hand behind his eyes as much as possible. The doctor was in charge of Sheriff Smith and said that he was going to go and get the body.

DOVER, N. H., Sept. 12.—Thousands of people are flocking to the Worcester street agricultural fair grounds, at the edge of the town, today, and it looks as if the second day of the fair will show the largest attendance in the history of the event. The food tent of yesterday, where the fair was opened, again all the program which, with one exception, was carried over from the first day.

Some racing, considerable and a balloon race were on the program for today. Over two score of horses were ready for the work in the light harness events which started at noon, when the first heat of the 2:20 race was started.

The first time in the history of the event the big groups and great crowds are missing from the exhibition. Farmers in this locality say that they were unable to move any of these big vegetable because of the long dry spell of weather.

The features of the exhibition will be the cattle, poultry and farm shows. There are two lots of high-grade cattle, 1,000 birds in the poultry show, and a mounted prize-winning dog on the grounds ready to be shown for prizes.

The first exhibition is one of the best ever seen in the State. N. H. Taylor, Nathaniel Taylor, Colonel John E. Taylor and Edward Taylor are the chief contributors to the show. They have sent thousands of plants, including a large lot of roses, and a large lot of fruit.

The garden in the back, where the first harness events are the largest ever seen in the State. In all three there are large crowds of people, and the garden is a beautiful sight.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMIT ST., BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 12, 1907

What Did the Mayor Say to "Jack" Doyle?

And Why Was the Indicted City Official's Brother Watching the Jury Drawing?

At the recent drawing of jurors, from whom will be selected twelve men to try Mr. Doyle, Mr. Fitzgerald, by virtue of his office as Mayor, graced the function. In the room, watching the drawing, was Mr. "Jack" Doyle.

Mr. "Jack" Doyle is the brother of the above-mentioned James H. Doyle, Mayor Fitzgerald's indicted Superintendent of Streets. Mr. "Jack" Doyle is also attached to the office of Cookley, Cookley & Sherman, who are defending James H. Doyle against the charge of attempted bribery.

When the last juror had been drawn Mr. Fitzgerald beckoned to Mr. "Jack" Doyle, who came forward and held with Mr. Fitzgerald a subdued conversation.

Mr. Fitzgerald in his political career has been a man unusually attended by what is commonly called luck. Wherever accident or the mistakes of others could combine together to help any man, they have helped him.

But it is a long road without a turn. Troubles are besetting Mr. Fitzgerald for every quarter. The sky is darkening fast over his head, and this is no time for him to throw discretion to the winds.

The AMERICAN attempts to draw no conclusions from the coincidence that Mr. "Jack" Doyle should be watching the drawing of the jurors for the criminal session this month; that Mr. Doyle is the brother of Mr. Fitzgerald's Superintendent of Streets, now under indictment, and that he is also connected with the office of Cookley, Cookley & Sherman, which so far has represented Mr. Doyle in his difficulties pertaining to the law. This may all have been proper enough; we do not say it was not.

But Mr. Fitzgerald ought to know that these coincidences naturally attract attention, and that men will wonder why Mr. Doyle was there and what the Mayor said to the brother of his indicted Superintendent of Streets at the drawing of the jury.

Mr. Fitzgerald's record as the servant of the corporations, his broken promises, his bad appointments and the general low tone of his administration will be a burden under which he must stagger, if indeed, he can sustain it at all, and we suggest to him that there is a very substantial virtue in keeping his actions above suspicion just now.

Not Intended for the People

The Merger Should Only Be Passed Upon by Men Like Mr. Mellen, Mr. Cole and Mr. Whitney

Mr. Cole adopts almost the same language in saying this that Henry M. Whitney used several weeks ago.

Charles S. Mellen also says the merger is not a political issue. Mr. Cole, Mr. Mellen and Mr. Whitney all agree on this point. And why not? Mr. Mellen hopes soon to be the Business Dictator of New England. Mr. Whitney is the RAILROAD CANDIDATE for Governor of Massachusetts.

Mr. Cole also has ambition. Some day HE may be the candidate of the Consolidated New England Railway for Governor.

Why SHOULD'T Mr. Cole and Mr. Whitney and Mr. Mellen believe that the merger is not an issue that should be passed upon by the people?

The Very Best Kind of Teacher

The Man or Woman That Encourages the Dull, Afflicted Child

Once in a country public school a young woman, the teacher, was sitting at the noon hour with a little girl, thin, pale and rather dull of face, beside her. The afflicted child, sitting as close to the kind-hearted teacher as he could, ate happily the simple food that had been prepared for him at home. Often he interrupted her eating to look up at the kind face near him; a smile of affection and encouragement always answered his look. The stronger boys and girls were elsewhere, eating or playing. The teacher had chosen for her companion the unfortunate boy of whom, out of his hearing, she spoke with simple kindness:

"That little boy has always been sickly. He is not very bright in his studies, and he is a little lame. You know how inclined other boys are to be cruel, how little they know the suffering that they inflict on children who are less intelligent, less strong than themselves. It would be easy to crush the spirit of this little boy; a little neglect by me and rough teasing by the bigger boys would soon do it. It is easy for me to look after him a little, and you would be surprised to know how he has been improving."

OF COURSE, the boy had been improving. Kindness will do for a child, and especially for a backward child, what sunlight will do for a flower. The kindness of the teacher to the backward child must have impressed all of the other boys and saved them into unnatural respect for the little cripple. And the gentle patience that must have accompanied so much goodness of heart gave the child every possible opportunity to overcome natural deficiency and to keep up with the other children.

That particular little boy may go through life to the end, dull, sad and without amounting to much. And the teacher may go through her life, as so many devoted teachers do, working hard, without the reward that she deserves.

It is certain, however, that she has set a good example to all teachers and to all fathers and mothers, and that her reward would be great if it were as big a one as she deserves. The sight of one teacher giving special attention to the needs and the pitiful plight of a backward child is more encouraging, more important than a thousand exulting in the achievement of their peculiarly bright pupils, and passing the others by.

A teacher's life is very hard. Nearly all of the public school teachers are overworked, underpaid, or both. If they have reasonably decent pay in a few big cities, too many children and too much work are crowded upon them. If they have smaller classes in distant parts they are not paid enough for decent support.

It is unreasonable to ask too much of the teachers, unreasonable to demand that they give separate attention to every child dependent upon them for knowledge. There would not be minutes enough in the day for that.

But we do feel that it is just to impress upon the teachers the importance of encouraging children who are backward, who are in health, deficient in sight or in bodily strength. There is always plenty of encouragement, applause and happiness for the strong, successful, brilliant child or grown person. What the world needs is kindness for the unfortunate, more of the peculiar sympathy of that country school teacher instinctively giving her best efforts to the least promising material, to the saddest soul.

Kindness to the unhappy, the backward, the afflicted, the unsuccessful, is the very foundation of Christian teaching, a foundation that seems too often to be lost sight of in the superstructure of modern civilization.
